A Bridge Too Far Cornelius

A Bridge Too Far (1974) by Cornelius Ryan gives an account of Operation Market Garden, a failed Allied attempt to break through German lines at Arnhem by taking a bridge in the occupied Netherlands during World War II. Ryan named his book after a comment attributed to Lieutenant General Frederick Browning before the operation, who reportedly said to Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery, "I think we may be going a bridge too far."

"A Bridge Too Far" is the classic text on the history of Operation Market Garden. It is more detailed and less of a narrative history than Cornelius Ryan's other famous book "The Longest Day" but is still extremely readable. As a fan of the movie I was surprised at how well the film version relates the story told in the book.

Sir Richard Attenborough defended his depiction of Browning, by pointing to the final scene, where he says, "As you know, I've always thought we were going a bridge too far." Browning did actually say something very similar to this (hence the title of Cornelius Ryan's original book, and this movie), but he said it well before the operation started.
