SHIPS IN FALL Beautiful native woody vine, American Bittersweet is cherished for its orange berries in the fall that will be a highlight in the landscape when there is little color available. The branches also make a great addition to fall centerpieces and wreaths. The berries are also a good source of fall food for birds. The vigorous vines are great for covering unsightly fences and structures.

American bittersweet is a climbing vine that twines around its support. Its attractive feature is its autumn fruit, a yellow-orange three-lobed capsule with showy orange-red seeds. For fruit, American bittersweet needs both male and female vines and should be sited in full sun and pruned in early spring. Do not confuse this vine with Oriental bittersweet, Celastrus orbiculatus, an ...
